

CHRIS MORRIS

Speaker | Author | Ministry Leader

Helping churches and faith communities rediscover honest faith in the middle of real-world hardship.

Why Chris Speaks

Faith was never meant to be a place where people hide their pain. Yet in many Christian communities, suffering is often met with pressure: be stronger, pray harder, don't let anyone see the struggle.

Chris Morris helps churches and faith communities create spaces where honesty and faith can meet. Through storytelling, biblical teaching, and practical tools, Chris equips leaders to guide conversations about hardship, doubt, and hope with compassion and clarity.

The result is communities where people feel safe enough to tell the truth-and where faith grows stronger in the middle of life's hardest moments.

Stage Introduction

Chris Morris is a seminary-trained ministry leader, author, and TEDx speaker who helps churches and faith communities talk openly about suffering, honest faith, and walking with God through real hardship. Through storytelling, biblical teaching, and practical frameworks, Chris equips leaders to guide difficult conversations with wisdom and compassion so communities can become places of refuge rather than performance.

CREATING REFUGE STARTS WITH CONVERSATION

A HEALTHY CHURCH DOESN'T HIDE THE HARD. IT HOLDS IT.

Churches want to support people who are hurting, but many leaders aren't sure how to begin conversations about suffering, doubt, and hardship.

This keynote equips faith communities with a compassionate framework for talking about life's hardest moments in ways that invite honesty, not silence.

Through biblical insight, storytelling, and practical tools, Chris helps audiences rediscover a picture of God who remains present in the storm-not just after it.
